

Dear nobody

I was totally wrong about Panagoulis when you asked how he died and I said, he had just died somehow, in prison maybe. No. They killed him you were right about that.

And the graffiti on the wall right in front of our faces—
 Behind knowledge sleeps fear,
 And if you renounce it [knowledge] you're a slave of the clock

First, you'll notice I didn't translate it correctly the first time this way makes it more interesting but also can you believe it? Did you know these lines are from Gogou?

Dear nobody

Did I get the story right? From --- saying the night before --- in preparation, --- were instructed to take up guard or something at the university. Somehow they didn't show instead there were assembled members of --- . So the --- showed up with brass knuckles and beat the shit out of their bodies thinking they were beating the shit out of --- .

This is not a statement against the --- , I know you know that the letter above with the blanks it's not for you and it's not for the Book it's for memory.

Dear nobody

Can I add a line to di Prima's Letters?

When the guy hiding you goes out to buy cigarettes, it's not a good sign

Dear nobody

How do you keep fear away?
I mean keep yourself exposed Sitting in the kitchen skinless
so much oxygen the cigarette self-ignites Through other people
Through sitting in rooms with other people Staring through each other's eyes love lights up none of its thousand pretenders Stay naked
